PUBLIC CHOICE

CONTENTS Volume 90, Nos. 1–4, 1997

Constitutional political economy
Edited by Charles K. Rowley

C.K. Rowley, Introduction: The relevance of public choice for constitutional political economy 1–10
S. Voigt, Positive constitutional economics: A survey 11–53
P.C. Ordeshook, Constitutions for new democracies: Reflections of turmoil or agents of stability? 55–72
M.J. Bailey, Toward a new constitution for a future country 73–115
J.M. Buchanan, The balanced budget amendment: Clarifying the arguments 117–138
M. Munger and T. Schaller, The prohibition-repeal amendments: A natural experiment in interest group influence 139–163
K. Daniel and J.R. Lott, Jr., Term limits and electoral competitiveness: Evidence from California's state legislative races 165–184
W. Thorbecke, Choosing free trade without amending the U.S. Constitution 185–200
K.L. Dougherty and M.J.G. Cain, Marginal cost sharing and the Articles of Confederation 201–213
L. Razzolini and W.F. Shughart II, On the (relative) unimportance of a balanced budget 215–233
J.-L. Migué, Public choice in a federal system 235–254
D.C. Mueller, Federalism and the European Union: A constitutional perspective 255–280
J.G. Backhaus, Subsidiarity and ecologically based taxation: A European constitutional perspective 281–310
G.W. Scully, Rule and policy spaces and economic progress: Lessons for Third World countries 311–324